As part of Andrea and Peter Schmitt's home renovation, they had a brand new kitchen installed, and in it we discovered some rather funky gadgetry from Blum.

"We'd always said that if we ever bought our own place we would go to Blum for kitchen parts. And so we did! When we hired our German contractor, Norbert Braun, to renovate the apartment and build our kitchen units, we got him to liaise with Blum and he incorporated their systems into his design.

Blum actually provided us with the kitchen 'hardware'. For example, the drawer mechanisms are all electronic. This means that you barely have to touch the drawers in order to open or close them. This also means that if my hands are full I can open them with my hip or my foot!

The hardware, and the drawer organisers, which we also bought from Blum, are fantastic quality and make our lives a lot easier."
