Don't risk ruining your Blum fixtures with incorrect installation

We have all heard of horror stories of friends or acquaintances that pay premium price for top quality furniture, only to later find it plagued with inferior workmanship or installed incorrectly. To prevent this from happening to their customers, Blum has rolled out its own free training program, the Skill Development Course (SDC), for carpenters, contractors and designers on how to improve their skills and to handle Blum products.

Armed with an objective to assist customers with the best possible service from hardware to installation, Blum has collaborated with carpenters and designers that have been specially trained to install Blum products. In particular, this includes the TANDEMBOX plus, TANDEMBOX intivo/antaro, AVENTOS, TANDEM, CLIP/CLIP top and SERVO-DRIVE. With trusted recommendations from Blum, customers are encouraged to engage carpenters and designers from Blum's recommended list. This is because only perfect installation can lead to Blum's distinct high quality of motion.

The process of engaging a Blum certified carpenter is also equally fuss free. All you have to do is log on to Blum Connect (<http://connect.blum.com>) and browse through the list of certified partners under the 'Partners' page. After selecting your preferred company, check that they have been certified by Blum before making contact with the company. Contact your chosen company and request for only carpenters that are listed and certified on the Blum website. Upon your carpenter's arrival, make sure that he presents a certification card that contains his name, photo and product certifications before installation begins.

It's just so simple. With a few clicks and an email or a phone call, your carpenter will be booked and you will have the peace of mind knowing that your Blum fixtures are in the best hands possible.
